Lycoming College student wins award

One of five Lycoming College biology students who attended the seventh annual Undergraduate Research Conference at the University of Maryland-Baltimore County Oct. 16 came home with a first-place prize.

Erin Karschner, a senior chemistry and biology major from Montoursville, took top honors in her section for a poster describing the results of her summer research internship at Washington State University. The project was titled "An Enzyme-Coupled Spectrophotometric Continuous Assay for S-Adenosylhomocysteine/5-Methylthioadenosine Nucleosidase."
